19th Sunday in Ordinary Time / Year C 10th & 11th August 2019

The longer form of today's gospel brings together a number of loosely connected sayings of Jesus about trust and vigilance. Jesus addresses his disciples affectionately as a "little flock". He tells them that there is no need for fear. God, their "father", has delighted in giving them "the kingdom" and they are to be generous in their turn. They are to sell their material possessions and give "alms" or, in a more accurate translation of the Greek original, they are to use their resources to engage in "works of mercy" (eleēmosunē). Their security resides in Jesus' assurance: "Where your treasure (or treasury) is, there your heart will be also." The parental and affectionate language of the opening verses is in sharp contrast with the violent imagery of the latter part of the gospel reading. Contrary to what some have argued in the past, the murderous slave master who cuts recalcitrant slaves into pieces can never be understood as a gospel image of God. In this problematic passage, the Lukan Jesus is engaging his hearers' experience of slavery in order to make a point about the need for attentiveness to the demands of the gospel. The vigilant slave is said to be "blessed" or "happy" or "privileged". From a contemporary perspective, it seems strange indeed to speak of a slave as fortunate. As the story unfolds, we realise that the slave enjoys a relative happiness in comparison with the fate of the other slaves.

The shorter form of the gospel in 12:35-40 presents a very strange teaching that would surely have been met with scepticism by its earliest hearers. The word picture that Luke paints is just not credible in a first century setting where slavery was taken for granted and where the respective roles of masters and slaves were characterised more by extreme violence than by mutuality of any sort. The disciples are told to be like slaves who keep vigil all night as they await the return of their master from a wedding banquet. Their function is to open the door when he knocks and, if they are awake enough to perform this function, there will be an extraordinary reversal of roles: the slaves will sit down at table while the master assumes the role of slave and serves their meal.

The disciples are being prepared for Jesus' announcement later in the narrative that he is among them as one who serves. They need to understand that something extraordinary is happening, even more extraordinary than the slave-master banquet scenario might suggest. God's way of being in the world is full of healing experiences and life-enhancing surprises. The final verses of the shorter reading shift to the image of the thief in the night. These verses are also about vigilance, being watchful and alert so as not to be taken by surprise in the final reckoning.

THE SHARED TABLE

We are now into the fourteenth year of The Shared Table project and I am happy to report that we have been able to forward just in excess of $18,145 to Peru over the past twelve months. Another wonderful effort.

In a recent email from Sr Mary, she writes... "Thanks for forwarding this cheque of $4,245. This month we will be using some of the money to buy a small stainless steel table for our Production Workshop which will be much more hygienic. The workshop is in the main church in the parish and a group of 3 women teach other women to bake bread, cakes, biscuits etc., which they can then bake in their homes to produce an income. It is especially good for the younger women, many of whom are single mothers." So you can be assured that your financial support makes a real difference to the families and members of Fr Mick's former parish on the outskirts of Lima.

Once again, a big thank you for your continued generosity.

God bless, Helen McBrearty,
Fundraising Co-ordinator The Shared Table

This Weekend's Responsorial Response: Happy the people the Lord has chosen to be his own.

Pope Francis' Intention for August:

FAMILIES, SCHOOLS OF HUMAN GROWTH

Andrew Hamilton SJ

Pope Francis' Intention for August is that families, through their life of prayer and love, become ever more clearly 'schools of true human growth'.

When I was at school I wondered if I could ever be a good parent. I thought I would never know enough to teach my child how to walk, talk, pray and read. I imagined that all teaching was like that done at school – teacher knew everything and had to explain it in words the student would understand.

Of course, not all teaching is like that. Small children learn by imitation, doing what they see others do. That is true also of the most important thing in life – learning how to live. We learn from the example of those we love and admire.

That is why Pope Francis calls families schools of true human growth, both for children and adults. We learn from one another's example, are inspired by our young children's innocence just as they are by our experience, and learn from the encouragement we receive in our experiences of success and failure, of sin and forgiveness, of experiment and reflection, of foolishness and wisdom.

In families, too, we learn to negotiate. As little children everything is about ourselves. We gradually learn that we need to persuade others if we are to get what we want. As time goes on, we find we want to please people because we love them. We gradually learn the complex grammar of relationships. We see that in order to get our way on one thing we often need to give way on another, that the greatest gift we receive comes in the gift we make of ourselves, and that if we accept gifts from others they will often be more delighted than if we had given them a gift.

Families, too, are the place where we learn the language of faith. In many Catholic families children first learn to pray at home, come to believe in a God who loves them, and make Jesus and Mary their friends. But the deeper learning takes place not through words but through what the family does. Faith is part of living together. If we pray together as a family, go to church together, have religious art around us, and associate with God the deep, wordless experiences we have of beauty and of mystery, and if the life of Jesus becomes vivid in our childhood, our faith will be deeply rooted.

Our family experience also shapes the way we imagine God and church. Our parents provide our earliest and most enduring images of what God is like. When we first say the Our Father the face of God that we see is likely to be that of our own father or mother. If we hear that Jesus is our brother, he will be like our own brother. The way we see the church and its liturgy will also be coloured by the ways in which we celebrate events in our own close and extended family.

No family is perfect, of course, and we all need to forget some lessons we learned in our families, just as our own children will have things to forget. Schools and families are made up of human beings from whom we will often learn what God is not like, as well as what God is like. Above all, our families introduce us to the real world in which we live and teach us how to live generously within it.

REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH CARE REFORM BILL

*Statement by Fr David Ranson—Diocesan Administrator
On the NSW Reproductive Health Care Reform Bill 2019
6 August 2019*

Given that the Reproductive Health Care Reform Bill 2019 is currently being debated in the NSW Parliament, I wish to convey my strongest personal opposition to the proposed legislation in its current form. In so doing, I record also the formal objection of the Catholic community of the Diocese of Broken Bay.

The decriminalisation of abortion is one matter. The social factors in which the practice of abortion flourishes are complex and require our careful attention. The response to these requires a great deal of consideration in light of the often-difficult circumstances in which the decision for an abortion is made. However, the killing of life, with the liberal possibility allowed for in the proposed legislation, cannot make ours a more human society. If with legal sanction we kill those who are most vulnerable, either at the beginning or at the end of their life, we rob ourselves of our human dignity which is best demonstrated in a quality of care exercised even in the face of life's demand and challenge. Such an option represents a gross failure of social imagination and public moral leadership.

The widening of the scope of the practice of abortion, which the proposed legislation suggests, is unacceptable. A woman certainly has rights of her own body, as does a man. But both also have responsibility to protect the body of the separate life entrusted to them. That independent life is not of such little value that it can be arbitrarily extinguished often with the price of silent, life-long trauma of women who feel pressured to terminate their pregnancy and the life of the child they carry. Rights can never be promoted without responsibility. And what greater responsibility do we have than to care for life?

In raising this objection, I implore the NSW Government to commit both to increasing those social services that will genuinely assist women who find themselves with an unwanted pregnancy, and to raising sustained awareness about such services. Our own Catholic social service agencies are present and ready to assist in this enterprise. I urge the Members of the NSW Parliament to vote in such a way that the rights of all are genuinely protected.

PLENARY COUNCIL – the next step

The six themes for the Plenary Council invite us, the People of God, to consider how we are called to be a Christ centred Church in Australia that is:

- Missionary and Evangelising
- Inclusive, Participatory and Synodal
- Prayerful and Eucharistic
- Humble, Healing and Merciful
- A Joyful, Hope-Filled and Servant Community
- Open to Conversion, Renewal and Reform

We are invited to organise Listening & Discernment Groups coordinated by Parish Leaders with the aim of prayerfully reflecting on each of these themes. These Parish Leaders will receive information and direction through Formation Sessions to be held in Mildura on the 19th and 20th of August.

In the coming weeks, some of you will be approached to lead these groups, and to attend one of the above mentioned formation sessions. My suggestion is that we form at least 6 groups (12 would be even better) who will take one of the themes each as their particular focus. The groups might choose to meet only once, or they may decide that more than one meeting is necessary – that will be the decision of each group.

I invite you to generously consider your commitment if you are approached to lead a group.
