Fourth Sunday of Easter / Year C 11th & 12th May 2019

Today's gospel is amazingly reassuring for those who truly hear the voice of Jesus. He "knows" them. These are the ones who "follow" him, those who live as he lived, caring for the "flock". There is a sense of mutuality in hearing and in being known. The inheritance of the "known" ones is "eternal" or never-ending life. In other words, they participate in God's way of being in the world. Just as the shepherds of the ancient world protected their flocks, so the followers of Jesus are secure in his "hand", secure in the "hand" of God, for Jesus and "the Father" are one. Later in John's gospel, Mary Magdalene will hear Jesus' voice and recognise him when he calls her by name. She is one whom Jesus' "knows". Her faithful following of Jesus will find expression in her presence at the foot of the cross and her visit to the empty tomb.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd, founded in post-revolution France to shepherd God's people, especially young women at risk, take their inspiration from the gospel image of Jesus as shepherd. They continue to shepherd God's people, including women who have been trafficked as sexual slaves. In recent years they have expanded their mission and, together with their associates and partners in ministry, have decided "to shepherd God's creation". Their foundress, Sr. Mary Euphrasia Pelletier, understood the ways of shepherds in mid-19th century rural France: "How, in fact, do good shepherds act? They forget themselves and often have to endure hunger and thirst. They are crushed by fatigue and difficulties—no matter! They are happy if their sheep do not suffer and if they find those that are lost. What trouble they take to lead their sheep to good pastures! In summer they seek out places where there is water and shade; in winter they lead them to where the cold is less biting and the grass more abundant. If they notice poisonous plants near the little lambs they hasten to pull them up. Day and night they are on guard against wolves—they never completely relax." The same respectful stance is needed as we seek to care for our threatened Earth community.

For the earliest readers of John's gospel, the term "good shepherd" was a contradiction in terms. Shepherds were known to trespass on the property of others in their search for feed. A positive image of the shepherd is nonetheless part of Israel's prophetic tradition. John's gospel evokes that tradition. It also evokes the figure of David, the shepherd boy who was destined to become king and to shepherd God's people. For biblical scholar Margaret Daly-Denton, the Israelite understanding of kingship is "shepherding done in the name of the true Shepherd of Israel (Ps. 80.1), the kind of care that reveals the divine 'care-fulness'" (John: An Earth Bible Commentary, T&T Clark, 2017, 144). Those who hear the voice of Jesus are called to that kind of care for one another and for our planetary home.

The Good Shepherd

This Weekend's Responsorial Response: We are his people, the sheep of his flock.

JEAN VANIER

Founder of L'Arche communities for adults with learning disabilities

My first encounter with Jean Vanier was at age 18. Like many millions of young Canadians, it was through his books. Struggling with many doubts about my faith and those existential questions that afflict all teenagers, I turned to Be Not Afraid, his 1975 reflection on how to be disciples of Christ.

I won't say it answered all my questions, but it opened my heart and mind to the possibility that the Jesus I grew up with as a cradle-Catholic could remain real and vibrant to a young, intellectually curious — and often cynical — young adult.

Vanier spoke with authority and compassion, reminding me that the faith I knew best could not possibly be fruitful unless it was lived out in a community of believers. He was very persuasive. I abandoned any thought I could have a relationship with Jesus all on my own and, slowly and fitfully, returned to the fold.

His death this week at the age of 90 reminded me of the gentle yet powerful influence he had on me and whole generations of fellow Canadians.

It's true, Vanier belonged to the world. His work spanned continents and his 40 or so books have been translated into numerous languages. But the life and work of this native son lives on in my country in a unique way, having shaped within us the very notion of what it means to be Catholic in the modern world.

This year is the 50th anniversary of L'Arche in Canada. The organization Vanier founded in Trosly, France, in 1964, took deep root here, starting with the community of Daybreak, just north of Toronto. Today, 29 of the more than 150 L'Arche communities are in Canada.

Among my circle of young adult Catholics, Jean Vanier was, along with Mother Teresa, a modern-day saint. We avidly read his books and listened attentively during discussion group videos of his live presentations.

If we were lucky, we had a chance to hear him in person. Even before large groups, he seemed to be talking to each of us individually, directly confronting our deepest longings and fears in that soft confiding voice.

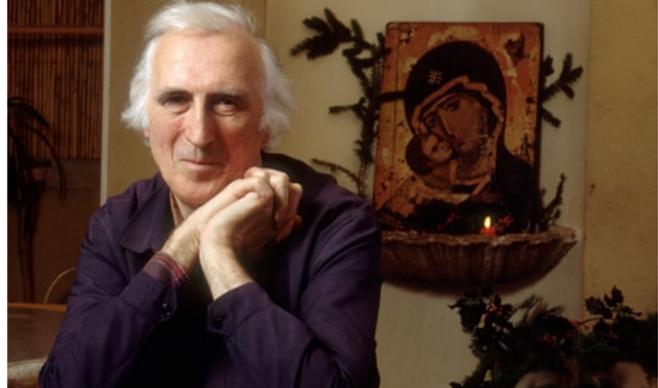

Vanier would be the equivalent of a moral rock star in Canada, becoming a Companion of the Order of Canada, delivering the prestigious Massey Lectures on CBC Radio to the entire country, receiving the Templeton Prize and being nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize. Despite his exalted reputation, he continued to spend large portions of his time with ordinary people — teachers, volunteers in his communities, health-care workers, social workers and, most of all, his beloved core members of L'Arche.

"Jean Vanier has shaped my whole adult life inspiring me through his writings, retreats, Gospel of St John course, and his life with his companions in Trosly," he wrote John Guido, a veteran L'Arche leader in the Toronto area:

"Today I think of the personal encounters: inviting me to go to Daybreak in 1985, encouraging me to commit my life to L'Arche in the early 1990s, apologizing on a bus to Canterbury for calling me Guido for years instead of John. I was delighted that he even knew my name," he said in an online tribute to Vanier on the L'Arche Canada website.

I recall interviewing Vanier in 1995 as a journalist working for The Catholic Register, Canada's English Catholic national newspaper. We spent an hour together in the north Toronto living room of one of his many friends.

We talked about "family values," a phrase already emerging as shorthand for a harkening back to 1950s ideas about the definition of family and sexual morality.

Vanier came from one such family. Former Governor General Georges Vanier, a war hero and pious Catholic, and his wife Pauline were one of Canada's best-loved couples. And they raised five children, among them a Trappist monk, a hematologist, an abstract artist and a translator.

"If there were an aristocracy in Canada, the Vanier family would be prominent on the list," writes Michael W. Higgins, the Canadian author of Jean Vanier: Logician of the Heart (Novalis 2016).

Then there was Jean, who became a Canadian navy veteran, a philosopher and, for a short time, a teacher at the University of St. Michael's College, known internationally for its Faculty of Theology.

However, this Vanier's notion of family was expansive. It included the poor, the helpless, the disenfranchised and outcast. It was shaped by Vanier's embrace of mercy as a core virtue and his growing insight that those who have least offer profound lessons in love to those who have everything.

This notion would be at the heart of the L'Arche phenomenon — and counter to what he saw happening in the world around him.

"There's a movement to the right, a rejection of welfare, a rejection of immigrants, a rejection of the different," he told me.

"There's a whole movement of the rich wanting to protect themselves and that's different than it was. Very different."

For Cardinal Thomas Collins, archbishop of Toronto, Vanier taught us to uphold the dignity of every person.

"In a world that increasingly pushes us to gauge success and worth by what we own or who we know, he reminded us that authentic love, friendship and community are what we need," the cardinal said in a prepared statement.

Indeed, Vanier's words are prescient when viewed through the lens of 2019. In an age of uncontrolled anger and fear of others, his legacy is both a challenge and an inspiration.

QUOTE FROM LAUDATO SI
 #141
 Today, the analysis of environmental problems cannot be separated from the analysis of human, family, work related and urban contexts, nor from how individuals relate to themselves, which leads in turn to how they relate to others and to the environment. There is an interrelation between ecosystems and between the various spheres of social interaction, demonstrating yet again that "the whole is greater than the part".

PARISH SACRAMENTAL PROGRAM
The children in Grades Five and Six who made their First Reconciliation last year have begun their preparation for the reception of the Sacraments of Eucharist and Confirmation. Each Sunday they will be invited to attend Liturgy of the Word in the Crying Room at the back of the Church led by one of the teachers from our school. Both Sacraments will be celebrated on Sunday June 23rd 2019, at the 10.30 Mass. This Mass will be led by the School Staff and Children. Anyone who would be willing to accompany these children as a 'Prayer Partner' please give your name to Janine Dannatt after Mass today.

SCHOOL NEWS:
An Open Day will be held on Monday, May 13th so if you know of anyone who may be interested in sending their child to our school, please let them know and encourage them to contact the school for more information. Enrolments will be taken from May onwards.
OLSH are collecting Bread Tags which are sent to South Africa where they are sold to a plastics company. These proceeds are then used to provide wheelchairs to people who can't afford them. Over 600 wheelchairs have been supplied through this program in the past 12 years. Let us support the school in this project. A container is on the table at the back of the church for these tags.

THANKYOU
Please accept my sincere appreciation for making my 80th birthday such a memorial and enjoyable occasion. It is the first time that I have been able to celebrate such an occasion with my Parish Family as well as my own family on what I consider as 'Home Ground'. Thank you for all the cards, flowers, gifts and a special thanks to those who organised and provided all the beautiful food and birthday cake. I know these events don't just happen without cost both physically and materially. With deep gratitude THANK YOU! Carmel

OUR DIOCESAN COMMUNITY:
Please remember to take your copy of ODC, great reading.

MERBEIN FLOWER POTS MOSAIC PROJECT

ST VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY MONTHLY MEETING
Thursday 16th May, 7pm.

Today is the World Day of Vocations. Pope Francis tells us:
There can be no greater joy than to risk one's life for the Lord ! I would like to say this especially to you, the young. Do not be deaf to the Lord's call. If he calls you to follow this path, do not pull your oars into the boat, but trust him .
Let us pray for the young people in our community, and in our families and circle of friends. May our prayers help them to be open to the Lord's call to consecrated life or priesthood.
