HUMOUR:

The strongman at a circus squeezed the juice from a lemon between his hands. He then said to the audience, "I will offer $200 to anyone in the audience who can squeeze another drop from this lemon. A thin scholarly looking woman came forward, picked up the lemon, strained hard and managed to get a drop. The strongman was amazed. He paid the woman and asked, "What is the secret of your strength?" "Practice," the woman answered. "I was the treasurer of a Catholic Church Finance Council for thirty-two years!"

NEWS:

Syrian priest tells of atrocities and why Australia must help

Father Rahal Dergham understands the Syrian refugee crisis better than just about anyone else in Australia, having witnessed unimaginable changes since he moved here eight years ago, reports news.com.au.

When the Sydney priest arrived from Syria, he says he left a country that was "moving forward". In his home town of Hama, the young clergyman freely held Masses, his family worked happily and worshipped freely, and the children went to school for a decent and compulsory education.

Now, he says, it's a completely different place. Every time he speaks to his family or friends who are still there or have recently fled, or even when he checks up on how the conflict is progressing online, there are some terrifying reminders of how bad it has become.

“He was a peaceful man, a kind man,” Father Dergham says of his close friend and former colleague Father Francois Murad.

The priest was one of the early victims of Islamic State’s broadcast beheadings. “They taped it when they decapitated him and posted the video on YouTube. We saw it even before the media started talking about it. Now whenever you search Syrian crisis or anything about Christian persecution, you will see him.”

The 33-year-old has seen, heard of, and counselled his friends over more atrocities than any man his age should have encountered.

There’s the time a teenager from his town was tortured and murdered trying to visit his family at Christmas. “One of the last ones we lost was a young man, he was about 18,” he says. “He was not even armed. He had run away from the compulsory army service and was working in Lebanon but he was smuggled back to the country to be with his family on Christmas Day.

“At the checkpoint they, ISIS, found him and took him from the car. They took him out and they beat him and he was killed. His family didn’t get to see him for Christmas Day but they did see him again.”

When the parents of that young man saw him again, Fr Dergham explains, his body had been delivered to them in a plastic bag, chopped into pieces.

“We’ve received many of our people in parts,” he says. Like the time a taxi driver, the young priest used to work with, was returned to his family.

REFLECTION ON TODAY’S SCRIPTURE

Jesus was well aware of the constant temptation for the leaders amongst his followers to be conditioned by the surrounding social and political structures. So, when he became aware that his disciples were disputing ‘who is the greatest’, he decided to teach them a lesson by engaging in some counter-cultural street theatre.

Jesus saw a young boy on the edge of the crowd and beckoned him into the middle of his group of disciples. This was not because of some sentimental idea that all kids are little innocents, but because in his society, children were absolutely at the bottom of the social scale. Jesus moved an utter nobody from the margins of society to the centre, challenging his disciples to change their perspective.

This challenge is made to all of us. We must identify those on the margins, some of whom we have quite literally dis-located like indigenous communities or asylum seekers, and bring them into the centre of our concern. There may be pain, personal and social, in changing perspective.

We might pause for a moment to pray for a new way of seeing, for perseverance in re-locating someone in the centre of our concerns, for the graceful insight that in welcoming that person we have welcomed Christ.
