Mass of the Oils: Monday, March 26, 2018

The Mass of the Oils will be celebrated in St Patrick's Cathedral, Ballarat at 6.30pm on Monday, March 26, 2018. This Mass is a celebration of the whole Church of the Diocese of Ballarat. We celebrate the unity and ministry of the ordained priests in the midst of the entire priestly people of God of the Diocese. This Mass also has special significance for those who will use the blessed oils in 2018 – the sick, those to be baptised and confirmed. All members of the Diocese are invited to participate in this celebration which truly expresses the unity of the Diocesan Church. Ministries required for the Mass of the Oils include Ushers, Readers, Oils Bearers, Presentation of the gifts, Collection of Oils, Musicians and Singers. For further information contact the Pastoral Ministry Office, ph. 5337 7159 or pastoralministry@ballarat.catholic.org.au

Dr Burn says between 2016 and 2017 the AFP has taken 150 referrals and investigated close to 100 of those.

She says no longer can we ignore what's plain and clear.

"We know this is happening in Australia," she told news.com.au. "There's been a view for some time that slavery has historically only affected women from Southeast Asian countries who were trafficked to Australia, but that's not the case."

Dr Burn said slavery is common in Australia's labour force, particularly "hospitality, construction and agriculture". But, perhaps most disturbingly, it's happening in suburban homes behind closed doors.

"We've seen recently there's been an increase in cases that test the nexus between family violence and slavery-like practices," she said. "There have been a number of cases that cross the line from one to the other."

Dr Burn works with survivors and says slavery is being carried out in Australia across the board, and across cultures.

Federal Parliament launched an inquiry into modern day slavery and published its findings in a report titled Hidden in Plain Sight in December 2017.

One recommendation from the report is for the establishment of an Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner and Modern Slavery Act.

The Federal Government is in the process of establishing a Modern Slavery Act. It's likely to come into effect before the end of the year.

SCRIPTURE REFLECTION:

Israel believed that the temple was built over the navel of the universe, the axis mundi, that spot where the world above and the world below met the world of history, thus enabling the three worlds to communicate. When Jesus called himself the new temple, he was claiming to be the centre of the universe, the spot where three-way cosmic communication occurs, the presence of God in the midst of the community. When we accept him in faith, we are accepting these claims. We may profess this belief, but do our lives reflect it?

Although some consider the law a rigid set of precepts, it is really more a collection of directives that have grown out of the experience of life. To say that Jesus is the wisdom of God means that God's wisdom is made known in him and that he is the way that points to God. While laws often embody distinctive cultural values or customs, as wisdom of God, Jesus crosses cultural boundaries and breaks down cultural distinctions. As the wisdom of God, Jesus fulfils the expectations of any and all codes of law.

Both the law and the temple witness to the power of God in the lives of believers. However, both institutions pale in the light of Jesus who is identified as the power of God. This divine power is not revealed in lofty precepts or in magnificent stones, but rather in the broken and pierced body of Jesus Christ. How willing are we to accept him?

HUMOUR:

A priest was walking along the corridor of the parochial school near the preschool wing when a group of little ones were trotting by on the way to the cafeteria. One little lad of about three or four stopped and looked at him in his clerical clothes and asked “Why do you dress funny?”

He told him he was a priest and this is the uniform priests wear.

Then the boy pointed to the priest’s plastic collar tab and asked, “Do you have an owie?”

The priest was perplexed until he realized that to him the collar tab looked like a band-aid. So the priest took it out and handed it to the boy to show him. On the back of the tab are raised letters giving the name of the manufacturer.

The little guy felt the letters, and the priest asked, “Do you know what those words say?”

“Yes I do,” said the lad who was not old enough to read. Peering intently at the letters he said, “Kills ticks and fleas up to six months!”

NEWS:

SLAVERY NEVER BEEN A BIGGER PROBLEM IN AUSTRALIA

Published: 26 February 2018

Slavery has never been a bigger problem in Australia than it is right now, according to a law professor and leading anti-slavery activist. Source: news.com.au.

Jennifer Burn, director of Anti Slavery Australia at the University of Technology, Sydney, and a professor of law, says that between 2004 and 2007, Australian Federal Police looked into more than 900 allegations of human trafficking and slavery.

International Women's Day shines the spotlight on rural women

Catholics across Australia are being invited to join with people around the world in considering the particular challenges women face when they live outside metropolitan areas.

International Women's Day, which is celebrated each year on March 8, this year has the challenging theme "Time is Now: Rural and urban activists transforming women's lives".

Drawing on the theme of the upcoming 62nd session of the UN Commission on the Status of Women, the day will help give voice and support to the work, the rights and the activism of women living in rural areas across the globe. They make up more than one quarter of the world's population.

International Women's Day this year comes on the heels of an international movement for women's rights, equality and justice. The harassment of women and violence and discrimination against women has received significant media attention and prompted rising determination for change.

"Women in rural areas are keeping their family hopes high in the face of adversity," said Bishop Michael McCarthy, Bishop Delegate to the Council for Australian Catholic Women (CACW).

"The theme of this year's International Women's Day invites all Australians to salute women and acknowledge the rich support that they provide to family, community and Church. Our Catholic tradition honours the many ways that women minister and provide pastoral care."

The CACW is urging Catholics to educate themselves about the specific disadvantages that affect rural women and to act for justice ahead of International Women's Day.

CACW chair Lorraine Barker said women who live in rural areas are experiencing a number of disadvantages, faring worse than men in rural areas and women who live in urban areas.

"The inequality that exists across a whole range of areas is unacceptable and while it shouldn't take International Women's Day to put the spotlight on this issue, March 8 must be a day for us all to consider how we help correct this injustice," she said.

John Ferguson from the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council said: "In Australia, the impact of disadvantage can be exacerbated for women in rural and remote locations, where employment opportunities are scarce, welfare and health services are limited, and where family and social support networks can be stretched due to the tyranny of distance, population decline because younger generations are moving to metropolitan areas and the loss of social infrastructure."

Churches and other faith-based groups around the world will be using International Women's Day to underline their shared commitment to empowering women.

The CACW provides advice to the Bishops Commission for Church Ministry about the inclusion of women and their participation in the Catholic Church in Australia.

Its mission is to increase the number of women in decision-making, leadership and ministry roles in the Church. The Council coordinates mentoring and leadership development programs, especially for young women.
