HUMOUR:

The preacher, in his Sunday sermon, used "Forgive Your Enemies" as his subject. After a long sermon, he asked how many were willing to forgive their enemies. About half held up their hands. Not satisfied he harangued for another twenty minutes and repeated his question. This time he received a response of about 80 percent. Still unsatisfied, he lectured for another 15 minutes and repeated his question. With all thoughts now on Sunday dinner, all responded except one elderly lady in the rear.

"Mrs. Jones, are you not willing to forgive your enemies?"

"I don't have any."

"Mrs. Jones, that is very unusual. How old are you?"

"Ninety three."

"Mrs. Jones, please come down in front and tell the congregation how a person can live to be ninety-three, and not have an enemy in the world."

The little sweetheart of a lady tottered down the aisle, very slowly turned around and said:

"It's easy, I just outlived the mongrels."

NEWS:

Archbishop Mark Coleridge (CNS/Paul Haring)

In a conversation about sexual abuse in Australia and the United States, Brisbane Archbishop Mark Coleridge said "until there is a genuine restoration of trust, no apology is going to land". Source: America Magazine.

"We have to accept now restoring trust will only come over time if in fact we do the things we say we're going to do," Archbishop Coleridge said in a video interview with America Magazine.

Archbishop Coleridge said the dominant mood in the Church in Australia following the five-year Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse is one "probably is a sense of bewilderment, really, because this is a crisis the like of which we haven't faced in our history".

He noted that there were advantages to having a national scope with the inquiry and response. He said the national approach was vital in preventing a "fragmented and at times contradictory response" to "an area as vital as child protection." However, the Archbishop stressed that the national nature of the response also had "enormous challenges" because with seven distinct jurisdictions "Australia in the singular doesn't exist."

To Archbishop Coleridge, the royal commission with "its secular eye upon the life of the Church was extraordinarily important and helpful," but it "didn't do God and couldn't do God" the way the Church now must.

In Archbishop Coleridge's eyes, there are many more effective ways to protect children from sexual abuse than changing Church teaching about the seal of confession or priestly celibacy, another issue the commission recommended the Church to revisit. He stressed the importance of changing the Church's culture and listening to survivors.

"Here, I'm echoing Pope Francis because he talks about a synodal Church as a listening Church," he said. "We need that combination of passion and commitment to act. But patience, given that it will take time."

When asked about how to restore trust among Catholics, Archbishop Coleridge said, "The only thing that I can see that will restore trust is action ... a willingness to act no matter what the cost."

SCRIPTURE REFLECTION:

Jesus opens our eyes to the reality of God's presence in our midst, in the goodness of people and in the tenderness of life, even in its vulnerability. He opens our ears to hear the word of God spoken to us by others, revealed to us through the created world.

There is an eschatological dimension to being open to the word of God, because we are opened to hear something from the future. The prophets always speak about this future in the present tense. They see it happening already. Isaiah proclaims, 'Here is your God!' and the world is transformed. Jesus says 'Be open.' The good news always opens us to future possibilities, to personal and communal transformation, to a new creation. With the word of God, the future invades our present.

Although the eschatological future is already present to us, it is only unfolding, it has not yet opened completely. We still judge each other by appearances. We still miss the presence of God in the poor and the dispossessed, in those who suffer from disease or war or loneliness. We still shun those of another race, or those who have been shaped by another culture, or those who worship God in a different way. Although the eschatological future is already present, we have not yet put aside all of the biases of the past, we have not yet been fully transformed. But God has spoken, God has come to save us. God is trustworthy; God keeps faith forever.
