WOMEN NEED NOT BE PRIESTS TO LEAD

CHURCH, FRANCIS SAYS IN NEW BOOK

ROME — Pope Francis has strongly defended his record on naming women to positions of authority at the Vatican, saying in a new book that women do not need to be priests to serve as leaders in the global Catholic Church.

Francis also notes that in Catholic dioceses across the world women often serve in leadership positions, running Catholic schools or hospital systems, or heading up diocesan departments.

"Perhaps because of clericalism, which is a corruption of the priesthood, many people wrongly believe that Church leadership is exclusively male," the pope states in the book.

"To say they aren't truly leaders because they aren't priests is clericalist and disrespectful," he adds.

The pontiff brings up the issue of women serving in the church as part of a six-page reflection on the "leading role" that women have played during the pandemic. He says that countries with women at the helm "have on the whole reacted better." Francis says he has tried to "create spaces where women can lead, but in ways that allow them to shape the culture, ensuring they are valued, respected, and recognized."

The pope says he has also focused on naming women as consultants to several Vatican congregations, "so that they can influence the Vatican while preserving their independence from it."

"Changing institutional culture is an organic process which calls for integrating, without clericalizing, the viewpoints of women," states the pope.

PREFACE I OF ADVENT

The two comings of Christ

It is truly right and just, our duty and our salvation, always and everywhere to give you thanks, Lord, holy Father, almighty and eternal God, through Christ our Lord. For he assumed at his first coming the lowliness of human flesh, and so fulfilled the design you formed long ago, and opened for us the way to eternal salvation, that, when he comes again in glory and majesty and all is at last made manifest, we who watch for that day may inherit the great promise in which now we dare to hope. And so, we sing the hymn of your glory, as without end.

Prayers for the Faithful Departed

Dear God, We remember our relatives and friends who have died. We miss them dearly and wish they were here with us. Help us through our sorrow.

Our grieving is a sign of our love for them. We know that we were blessed with these people in our lives, and that they continue to live in us. God, may we be comforted today in knowing that our loved ones are at peace, in your embrace, and that one day we will see them again. Amen
