NATIONAL RECONCILIATION WEEK:

May 27 – June 3, 2021.

Colac has much to Celebrate as the Australian Church invites us to join together in celebrating 200 Years of Catholic Education. Our Parish Archives provide some insight into the Mission of the Catholic Church in Colac and the Sacrifices which parishioners endured over the years.

1961: “The history of the last 100 years in most parishes in Australia is a history of the Catholic education system. The original school was built with some government assistance on the government land grant, in the days of assisted denominational education. But the Education Act of 1873 changed all that. Catholics were now forced to pay for a system of education which they could not in conscience, use. The Bishops of the time say quite clearly that the future of the Catholic Church in this country depended on the building up of a truly Catholic education system. Their prediction has proved right, but its validity was provable only because the laity were prepared to make great sacrifices to follow the guidance of their spiritual leadership.

The oldest parishioners at Pirron Yallock recall giving to a Catholic School there. This school, closed for some time, was re-opened in 1920, and the task of educating was in the hands of ladies of the parish. Still later, the Sisters of Mercy succeeded to this charge.

The old church at Beeac became a school when St Michael’s was opened but was closed when bus transport into Colac became possible. Inevitably, Colac itself had the greatest problems in this field. The old school was replaced in 1934, but this building was destroyed in 1945 by fire. In 1946 saw the opening of the present St Mary’s School, a building so large that few persons, priests, or people, thought it would ever be filled. And yet, twelve years later the expansion of the Catholic population in this Parish necessitated the building of two more classrooms. Today, for the first time for many years, the problem arises. We must either build a new primary school, or there will be State education for many of the children. Never has advanced education been so necessary, and now a boys’ secondary school must be built and paid for. An effort as great as any in the past is called for.” (Planned Giving – Parish Appeal – 1961).

In 1876 Father Neal built a new school for Colac. It was on the corner of Calvert and Gellibrand Streets. Erected at the cost of 500 pounds it was described as a “fine new weatherboard Schoolhouse.” It doubled as a church and many years later it was divided and removed – one portion becoming the school at Pirron Yallock, the other the club rooms at Colac and was demolished in 1980’s.

When St Mary’s was completed in 1883, Father Nelan turned his attention to persuading an order of nuns to establish a convent in Colac. A site for a building was obtained in 1885 but three years were to elapse before four professed Sisters of Mercy and a postulant arrived. In charge was Mother M. Agnes Graham. Born in Belfast. She came to Colac via Warrnambool and Ballarat. She was revered and loved by all, she died in 1894.

As well as conducting the primary school At St. Mary’s and the secondary boarding school at St Joseph’s the Sisters travelled by horse cab to Corunnun (Coragulac) to teach at St Brendan’s School until the Good Samaritan Sisters came to take over in 1919. They also conducted the school at Pirron Yallock for many years and travelled to Beeac and Birregurra to give religious instruction in those centres. The Sisters also provided the first Principal of Sacred Heart School.

Monsignor L. Conway was the next Parish priest, holding office from 1944 to 1965. Soon after he arrived, St Mary’s school was destroyed by fire. He replaced it immediately by a fine brick structure which was opened in 1945. Other notable improvements during his time were the construction of the present presbytery in 1953 and of the Sacred Heart School in 1962. He was a man of vision. This vision was exemplified in the fact that he purchased thirty-eight acres at Elliminyt that eventually became Trinity and St Joseph’s Colleges.

Father Coley McKenzie, who hailed originally from the Noorat area, took Monsignor Gleeson’s place in 1973. He continued the work of involving the laity more directly in the management of the parish and in the liturgy. He was instrumental in moving St Joseph’s College to a site adjacent to Trinity in 1976, a prelude to the amalgamation of the two schools. (sourced from published Archives).
